March Presentation – Monthly Meeting Philip Craig Studio Tour

'Chez Atelier Craig' is the top full floor of a warehouse in Little Italy. It is a studio to dream on, full of large windows with several exposures, graced with high ceilings and brick walls for display. There is even room for a complete set of percussion instruments. There Philip, his wife Diane, graphic artist, and his daughter, also a painter, start their work days at 6 a.m. The studio hosts his own Open House every year, but is also expanding its uses as a venue for other artists' work, including an exhibition he sponsored for Toller Cranston. Tour members saw portraits and landscapes in oil, as well as his paints table and computer close by each other, both tools to adapt his visual memories of subjects, many inspired by travel. He answered our questions about paint companies, techniques, and promotion. With two solo shows and other minor ones each year, galleries in Winnipeg, London (UK), Toronto, and Calgary, Philip shows us it is really possible to make a living from art. Look for notices of his Fall Open House.

Supports for your art: Clamps and clips —By David Houlton

For me, one way of learning is to copy from one of the great masters. The problem is most works are found in rather heavy books. To get the book at eye level with the canvas, I found some rather large clamps helpful. What I do is clamp the book to a board of masonite and put it on a second easel next to the blank canvas. The only clamp large enough that I could find comes from the tool department in the hardware store. A real advantage is that they have flat pads on the ends and a ratchet arrangement which means little effort is required to get them in place or open again. With the flat pads they don't damage the books. I found these clamps in Home Depot and/or Home Hardware. I think their real use is to help carpenters clamp furniture. The price ranges from $12 - $14 each. I only needed two for a large book. A mat around the picture being copied helped to prevent distractions.

If you work from photos, this week I saw in Wallack's a plastic clamp designed to hold photos at eye level and clamped to the side of the canvas. The price for Wallack's "picture clip" is $10.39.

Have you any other ideas to pass around?
